Description

A mahogany Georgian Campaign Table with hinged leaves.

The table has a single, full length drawer and a pair of lopers to each side to support the leaves when the table is extended to double its width. When folded the leaves rest on the table top. The turned legs have brass caps to their tops and long steel bolts to fix them to the top. When removed, they fit inside the drawer for storage.

This table would have been useful for an officer to both work at and dine with a friend or two. It is well drawn and the multiple ring turnings to the top of the tapered legs lifts it with subtle decoration. Early 19th Century.

The table can be extended to a width of 42 1/8 inches (104.5cm).
