Description

A pair of treen Brighton Buns, likely to be stained fruitwood.

The two dishes of the candlesticks unscrew from their sconces to dismantle. The sconces, with their pair of snuffers, are then placed in one dish with the other screwed on to it to form a case containing all the parts.

The turning to the sconces is sharp and a little unusual with the dish shape to the bottom of the column. The dishes have a subtle lip and the snuffers a finial to lift them. There is some minor scarring to the wood and a small dent to the edge of one dish.

Although they look in colour similar to mahogany, they are too light in weight to be that wood and are probably a fruitwood that has been stained. Mid to late 19th century.

The size of one candlestick set up is given.
