Description

A large Leather Collar Box.

The box is made of leather hide with the bottom part lined in faded red card to give more rigidity. The top of the box has very worn initials that are W E S. A leather strap is stitched to the back of the bottom section and loosely fitted to the top belt loops to the front and back edges, so the top can be separated if need be. With the belt in place, it acts as a hinge connecting the top to the bottom.

The Box has some minor staining to one side likely caused by water, wear to the leather on the buckle and a few stitches are broken here and there but otherwise, the condition is good. Collar boxes were in common use at the turn of 1900 but now serve well as boxes to keep trinkets etc. in. Early 20th Century.
