Description

A leather Case possibly for some type of instrument or hats.

The exact original use of this case is not known as any dividers or fittings to the interior have been removed. It may have been to take some form of instrument such as a camera or for hats. The depth feels a little narrow for hats but it may been some type of specific head wear. It is a practical size though and takes A4 papers easily.

The case has a shaped handle to feel comfortable when gripped and sits on four domed studs to keep it off a wet surface. Early 20th Century.
